

Students struggle with group projects because communication among team members is inconsistent.

Group projects are common in college classes but they often become stressful because of the lack of communication among the group members. Some people respond quickly while others do not, and important information can get lost between all the emails, groupchats, and shared documents. As a result the lack of clear communication can cause tasks to not be evenly divided, which just leads to frustration and lower quality work. The problem is not the group project itself but the lack of consistent communication within the team.